Interlibrary Loan services provide access to materials not owned by UWF Libraries by borrowing them from other libraries. This free service is available by setting up an ILL account, using your Argonet password, from the library homepage http://uwf.edu/library/how_do_i/request/interlibrary-loan/ UWF students, faculty and staff may order books, chapters of books, and articles.

The easiest way to request books is to use WorldCat (online database list) or Mango (Union Catalog). That way, the book information is transferred to your interlibrary loan automatically. You must first be logged in to the Library website and your ILL account to be able to access the online databases and have them automatically generate a request in your ILL account.

Articles are often requested from databases by selecting the Interlibrary Loan request from databases. If full text or print copies of articles are not available in the databases or catalog, an interlibrary loan link will appear. The article information will automatically appear on your interlibrary loan request, making it simple to submit the request.

You may track requested interlibrary loan materials in your interlibrary loan account. Once materials arrive, we will notify you by email. Usually, we will send the request to at least five libraries owning the title.

Articles are electronically delivered to your interlibrary loan account in only a few days. Books are transported by a courier service and through the mail. It usually takes about a week to receive them. Faculty may request books be delivered to campus offices by identifying that method of delivery in their interlibrary loan account. Otherwise, books may be picked up at the Reference Desk of the library.

Books should be returned by the due date designated on the label by the lending library. You may request a renewal prior to the due date from your interlibrary loan account.

Most libraries are very gracious about lending us their materials but sometimes they will decline our requests if the material is non-circulating, rare, or missing. Textbooks are not loaned through interlibrary loan services.
