Library Instruction Services for Faculty

Library Instruction Sessions
Faculty may request library instruction sessions for their classes. Sessions are taught according to the needs of the course and course assignments by reference librarians who serve as subject area specialists. These sessions are generally conducted during a regularly scheduled class period and may include discussions of information literacy topics, such as forming a research topic and search strategy, finding information in subject-specific library resources, evaluating sources, and plagiarism.

Online Tutorials
In addition to instruction sessions, the UWF Libraries also provide self-guided online library and information literacy tutorials from our website: http://library.uwf.edu/tutorials/
Each tutorial has a quiz that may be used as a graded assignment. Tutorials may be linked to from D2L, as well.

Library Assignment Assistance
Subject Specialist librarians can also assist with incorporating research and information literacy skills into class assignments. We will collaborate one-on-one with you to see if research elements may be included in the structure of the assignment to guide students through the research process.
