We’re Going to Be Open Later
… and A Note on Bob Marley and Unification

To introduce you to our new, expanded—and improved!—fall hours, I’d like to start with a cautionary tale. Once upon a time, in a dorm room far, far away, I waited anxiously (and excitedly!) to meet my new roommate. I didn’t really know what to do to make a good impression but settled on the thought of Bob Marley as being a great unifier of all people. Plus, what-with-the-nerves, he could at least tell me via 3 little birds that “every little thing’s gonna be all right.”

Well, my roommate came in, and— lo! behold!— she was not the Bob Marley sort. She was also not the Britt sort. She also happened to be the sort who would stay on the phone talking loudly about her awful sister until 2:00am* while I tried to read Henry James. Meanwhile, other people on our floor played that Dave Matthews Band song, “Crash Into Me,” over and over—which I found not to be a great unifier, at least not after the 33rd time.

To say, what if I had a library—LIKE YOU DO NOW—where I could study until 2:00am in peace? Might I have wound up finishing that book earlier and made my way to the Dave Matthews Band dance party and become, on the whole, a more well-adjusted person? We’ll never know. BUT DON’T SQUANDER YOUR CHANCE!

Study till the cows come home with our new fall hours:

Library Survival Tips for the Start of the Semester

1. Like the UWF Libraries on Facebook or follow us on Twitter to stay in-the-know about library resources, events, and workshops.
2. Ask for help via Ask-a-Librarian Live Chat or Email, located on our homepage.
3. Come to a library workshop or event this semester: http://libguides.uwf.edu/calendar
4. Make an appointment with—or email—your Personal Librarian (if you are new) or the subject-specialist librarian for your major any time you get stuck.
5. Avoid the lines!: WEPA printers are also on all the upper floors, except for 4th.
6. Check out our Citing Sources guide for help with citations: http://libguides.uwf.edu/citingsources
7. Check out some cool equipment from our Circulation Desk (iPads, Kindles, Lap-tops, GoPros, Digital Cameras, Graphing Calculators, and more!).
8. Check out the view and our 3D Printer in the 5th floor Skylab.
9. Does your instructor require the “library plagiarism quiz”? Click on “Using Sources Ethically” under “Research Help” on our homepage for instructions.
10. Find scholarly sources from home via ONESearch on our homepage.* Be sure to click “Access” to log in from off-campus.

*and limit to scholarly, peer-reviewed journals!
